Auction and sales reports: CCN staff or assigned contributors write pre- and post-sale articles. Writers conduct interviews as needed and use information provided by the auction house as source material. Statements regarding sales are verified against prices realized. Lots that fail to meet reserve, or are bought by the consignor or their agent, are considered non-sales for the purpose of reporting. From time to time, CCN staff may request a copy of the invoice covering the auction transaction. Due to the public nature of auction transactions, this should not be needed often, but will be required in private treaty sales. Any information other than the price will be kept in confidence.
Attributions and values: Items attributed or values in CCN editorial content are offered as a service to our readers. In no way should they be construed to be an endorsement or official opinion on a specific item. Readers looking for definitive answers should seek the services of a professional numismatist. Numismatic COMMENTARY

By Bret Evans

Is MintChip the flavour of the future?

The Royal Canadian Mint has been taking pride in its innovation for a number of years.

Some of that innovation we have seen, such as colourized circulating coins, tri-plating for a unique magnetic signature, new security features on our high-value coins, and some really unusual treatments such as selective oxidation.

One area where the Mint has been working without talking much is the idea of electronic money.

Now it may sound a bit unusual to think about a corporation such as the Mint, which has a mandate to strike coins, working on using microchip technology to produce a cashless society, but it really does make a lot of sense.

Electronic transactions are becoming more and more common. It isn't even unusual now to encounter situations where cash is not an option. WestJet does not accept cash for in-flight purchases, for example, nor does the snack bar at Billy Bishop Airport in Toronto. So if electronic money is on the rise, it makes sense for a corporation in the business of making money to look at this as a potential new business area.

Although I am proud to be a "coin guy," I don't think electronic currency is a bad thing. Currency is something that evolves. There was a time when "money" meant land or livestock, before it evolved into simple bullion; now it is nothing more than a token used to represent money that exists on paper, and while it has gone in and out of favour, it still works. I am sure that 100 years from now, carrying cash will seem as logical as walking around with gold nuggets in your pocket.

> "I am sure that 100 years from now, carrying cash will seem as logical as walking around with gold nuggets in your pocket."

Today, electronic currency is limited mostly to debit cards, credit cards, and gift cards. The first two are certainly the most common, while the third is not always reloadable.

The problem with both debit cards and credit cards, at least in the minds of those of us who don't want Big Brother looking over our shoulder every second, is that they leave a paper trail. Even if you don't engage in illegal financial transactions, you may not be comfortable with your bank knowing where you spend every cent of your money. For some people it feels a bit intrusive, especially since we live in a society where we have a right to expect reasonable privacy in our personal lives.

It is one reason why I think digital cash will never totally replace other forms of money. It is possible that those who want anonymity may choose to return to using bullion of a defined weight and purity.

Obviously, the folks in Ottawa were paying attention.

Back in 2012, the Mint took the wraps off its MintChip, a new form of digital money.

While it is still in the early stages, the chip is basically a digital wallet. You will be able to spend it like cash, and reload it from a bank account, but transactions will be tracked to the chip, which can be transferred from person to person. While transactions can be tracked to a chip, there is no way of knowing who has that chip at any given moment.

That means that it is as close to real cash as possible. Assuming it works.

Last year, the Mint had a competition to see if programmers could develop applications for the new chip.

The proposals didn't produce an off-the-shelf solution, but it did prove that the chip had the potential.

At this time, the Mint has developed it a bit further and begun limited in-house testing. I don't know how long it will take, but I suspect we're going to hear more about this in the future.

What really worries me is that we may have to develop a new system of grading. Can a new microchip qualify as MD-63?

ALMOST UNCIRCULATED

An almost uncirculated collection of news, views and more…

GOVERNMENT WOES

The much-discussed shutdown of the United States federal government led to officials from the U.S. Mint postponing the event planned to unveil designs of Baseball Hall of Fame coins scheduled for next year. While production of the coins is going ahead as planned, the venue for the event, the National Numismatic Collection in the Smithsonian Institution, was closed.

ALTERNATIVE MONEY

According to the Vancouver Sun, alternative currencies are catching on in British Columbia. Such currencies, including seedstock, allow users to swap goods or services for coupons, which can then be used for all or some of the purchase of goods or services from participating businesses, or the balance can simply be kept on a ledger. Apparently about $25,000 of seedstock is in "circulation," about a third as coupons and the balance on paper.

POPPY COIN PLANNED

The British Royal Mint has confirmed that it will be striking a £5 Remembrance Day coin for the Channel island of Alderney. The coin will be a reprise of the 2012 Remembrance Day coin designed by Royal Mint engraver Emma Noble. Next year will mark a century since the of outbreak of the First World War.

SPEAKING OF THE MOTHER OF ALL MINTS

The Royal Mint has also confirmed that silver quarter-ounce Britannia coins will be made from metal recovered from the SS Gairsoppa, a merchant vessel sunk in 1940. Among the iron and tea in the hold was a large shipment of silver from India, needed to produce more coins in the early days of the Second World War. The wreck was located in 2011 and salvaged in a deal with Odyssey Marine Exploration.

STELLA GOT HER GROOVE ON

An 1880 $4 stella gold coin, one of the best known, sold for $2.5 million US in September, setting a record for that type, and putting it into the exclusive group of the 10 most expensive United States coins. A second stella, dated 1879, sold for just over $1 million in the same sale, conducted by Bonhams in California.

MUSEUM CLOSED

The Bank of Canada has closed the Currency Museum for a few years while the building and museum are undergoing renovation. After a wait of several years, we're hoping the new museum knocks our socks off, in a good way.

SPEAKING OF CURATORS

The American Numismatic Society has an opening for an assistant curator. For more information go to www.numismatics.org.

Collector RECOLLECTIONS

By John Regitko

Peddling macaroni to cover printing costs

Some years ago, the Royal Canadian Numismatic Association (RCNA) needed to reprint their very successful Canadian Numismatic correspondence course No. 2 since nearly all copies of the original printing were acquired by collectors.

The Numismatic Educational Services Association (NESA) had funded the creation and original printing of this educational manual. It, along with correspondence course No. 1, the Coin Kids manual and other educational projects. This had drastically reduced NESA's cash flow and put funding of other projects in jeopardy.

Albert Kasman earned a tray of the world's greatest macaroni and cheese in return for a donation to cover printing costs.

To assure ongoing funding of new worthwhile educational undertakings for the Canadian Numismatic Association (CNA) and other non-profit groups, I approached Albert Kasman to discuss the possibility of a donation. He is probably best known for collected wooden nickels, and was a frequent issuer of woods for Chanukah, Christmas, his birthdays, and for Ontario Numismatic Association (ONA) and CNA conventions.

Kasman was a generous individual, having previously donated material to the CNA Coin Kids program as well as paying the membership dues for any junior who wanted to join the Ontario Numismatic Association.

The cost of reprinting 100 copies of the CNA correspondence course No. 2 would run in the neighbourhood of $3,000. When I approached Kasman for a possible donation, he said would consider it, but with one stipulation.

My wife and I had invited Albert for dinner on a few occasions. He always asked for my homemade macaroni and cheese. He said he would donate $3,000 if I would give him a tray of my macaroni and cheese. I kid you not!

Without even consulting the NESA board if an exception to policy could be made about only accepting donations without any strings attached, I agreed. When he came over a few days later, we treated him to his favourite meal and presented him with another tray of macaroni and cheese to take home.

The following year, when CNA correspondence course No. 1 needed reprinting, he donated a further $2,000, for which I rewarded him with dinner and two trays of macaroni and cheese. Boy, he was a good negotiator.

If you don't believe this actually happened, other than asking Kasman directly, go to the front of the reprints of the CNA correspondence courses and you will find him being recognized as the donor who made the reprints possible.

You will also notice that the acknowledgement doesn't make reference to the world's most expensive macaroni and cheese. I should contact Guinness World Records!

Numismatic News earns, keeps your attention

COINNET

By Randy Heimpel

How can a coin company stand out from the hundreds of others who want your attention? The answer quite simply is to get your attention, then keep getting it.

Of the hundreds of shops worldwide, almost all on the Internet somewhere, choosing a reliable numismatic partner can be a daunting task. One company that has held my attention for several years now is entitled Numismatic News, found at www.numismatic-news.net.

The reason for this long-standing relationship is the fact that I receive three to five emails a week from them, and each one is new and different. Many present articles written like news reports, others are announcements of special events and shows, and others are feature sales and special in-house activities. Some take seconds to scan, and others use up several minutes. But they are all read.

It is important to mention that much of the communication from this site is about American currency and related issues, but the information and discussions about precious metals, coin value trends, and international market activity all impact Canadians as well. So, I always feel the browse is worthwhile.

The manager of the site is Krause Publications, creators of several newspapers and magazines – World Coin News, Bank Note Reporter, Coin Magazine, Numismatic News, coin catalogues – and one can easily find the places to sign up for a subscription to any or all of these works. We cannot lose site of the fact that this is also a wise advertising format, as are most websites owned by businesses.

Numismatic News is generous with key information and relevant discussions.

However, as always, one of the elements of a better quality web presence is its philanthropic nature. This one stands out with blatant generosity.

As an example, just below the header on the home page is the sign: "Get a Free Coin Guide – Get the entire Lincoln Cents section of the US Coin Digest." All you need to do is send in your email address and you will access the free PDF file.

One more thing, on the right side of the page is a list of five other free downloads. They include U.S. Type Identification Guide; American Eagles: More Than Just Bullion; Grading Paper Money; Instant Identifier: A Guide to 20th Century Coins; and International Number Systems Chart. These are wonderful gifts, and Krause and team deserve great praise for donating them to all collectors.

Technically, the web design is very efficient and easy to use. Top right, the first item is the registry for the very newsletter I receive; it takes only two minutes to sign up. Below that is the necessary search bar to aid orientation. The hot link bar crosses the page next, with 13 drop-down, self-explanatory buttons.

Of the first six (after Home) – News, Features, Blogs, Letters, Events, and Directory – the Features area caught my eye. Its sixth item is Beginning Coin Collecting, with six lengthy articles by professionals to assist new collectors. More generosity.

Of the remaining buttons – Marketplace, Shop, Affiliate, Downloads, Subscribe, Sweepstakes – Marketplace has a unique feature. Tapping it leads to a page that has six sections: Coins, Paper Money, Stocks & Bonds, Bullion, Exonumia & Misc., and Supplies and Services. You key in whatever you seek in one of the six accompanying search boxes, and you will find whatever you seek. Hopefully it will save a lot of time.

An FYI about the Sweepstakes button: the last prize for the Sweepstakes was the ninth coin in Palau's Tiffany Art series valued at $650US.

With only a few motions you will probably find yourself on what appears to be a totally different website, called Numismaster (www.numismaster.com). It is actually what might be called a sub-site for Numismatic News, but it does function independently; another Krause design. Many of the hot buttons here lead to the same spot, so not to panic.

The pages will appear busy, as there are lots of permanent and pop-up ads, but they are not intrusive. But beware … this is one of those places where you can spend a great deal of time.

Since they invite sharing on the blog "Community Voice" and under "Letters," you can become a critic or contributor, as you wish. It is clear, however, that Krause is doing its civic duty and sharing for the benefit of all.

Thanks Numismatic News, et al, for an enjoyable visit. I'm looking forward to the next auto-email already.

Keep well, and try to donate a coin or two to a youth collector this week.

Governor general Dufferin graces 19th-century $2 bills

Notes & BILLS

By Stanley Clute

The 1878 Dominion of Canada $2 features a portrait of Frederick Hamilton-Temple-Blackwood, 1st Marquess of Dufferin and Ava and third governor general of Canada.

As a very young child in Toronto, I resided in the family home only a few blocks away from Dufferin Street. I still have vivid memories of that street, named in 1876 for the governor general of the time, just two years before his portrait appeared on our $2 bills.

The Earl of Dufferin was one of the most successful British diplomats of the period. From 1872 to 1878, he served as the third governor general of the young Dominion of Canada. Frederick Hamilton-Temple-Blackwood, 1st Marquess of Dufferin and Ava, was descended from old Anglo-Irish aristocracy in the County Down, where his family had lived since the 17th century. The Blackwoods grew to be major landowners in Ulster. In 1763 they became baronets and in 1800 entered the Peerage of Ireland with the title of Baron Dufferin.

The future earl was born in Florence, Italy in 1826. He studied at Eton, the College of Christ Church, and Oxford, though he left school without graduating. Upon the death of his father in 1841 he succeeded to the title of 5th Baron Dufferin and Clandeboye in the peerage of Ireland. In 1849 he was appointed a lord-in-waiting to Queen Victoria, and the following year he was created Baron Clandeboye in the peerage of the United Kingdom.

In 1856 he commissioned the building of a schooner named Foam, in which he sailed the North Atlantic. Afterwards he wrote a very popular book about these travels, titled Letters from High Latitudes. I have not discovered who built the Foam, but in 1880, he commissioned a new yacht from the well-known shipbuilding firm of Forrestt & Son of Wivenhoe and Limehouse. The new yacht was named Lady Hermione, after his second daughter. It was completed in 1881 and was shipped to Constantinople, where its owner was to take up the post of ambassador to the Ottoman Empire.

Though a noted and skilful writer, Dufferin chose a career in public service rather than as a professional author. In 1860 he was appointed the British representative on a commission to investigate troubles in Syria and worked successfully with French, Russian, Turkish and Prussian commission members. In 1864, he was made under-secretary of state for India, then in 1866 he became under-secretary of war. In 1868, he became chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. In 1871 he was raised in the peerage to Earl of Dufferin, in the County of Down, and Viscount Clandeboye, in the County of Down. He added the name Hamilton to his own by royal licence in 1862 shortly before marrying Hariot Georgina Rowan-Hamilton. Ten years later he added the name Temple. Of the couple's seven children, the two youngest were born in Canada (Lady Victoria Alexandrina Hamilton-Temple-Blackwood in 1872 or 1873 and Frederick Hamilton-Temple-Blackwood on Feb. 26, 1875).

On June 25, 1872 Dufferin became the third governor general of Canada, a post he held until Nov. 25, 1878. He and his wife were very popular with Canadians, as is evidenced by the streets, schools and public buildings that were named after them. During their time in Canada, great things were happening to our country. Prince Edward Island joined Confederation in 1873. The Royal Military College of Canada, the Supreme Court of Canada, and the Intercolonial Railway were just three of the institutions created during Dufferin's term. As governor general, Dufferin set out to get to know Canadians. He visited every province, becoming the first governor general to visit Manitoba. He involved himself in Canadian politics as much as was permitted at the time, and he and Lady Dufferin worked tirelessly in the interests of Canada and its people. They gained the unstinting gratitude and admiration of Canadians of the time.

After his term as governor general expired in 1878, Dufferin served as the British ambassador to Russia from 1879 to 1881 and to the Ottoman Empire (now Turkey) from 1881 to 1884. In 1884 he was appointed viceroy of India. Later he served as ambassador to Italy from 1888 to 1891. In 1888 he was created Marquess of Dufferin and Ava, in the County of Down and the Province of Burma, and Earl of Ava, in the Province of Burma. From 1891 to 1896 he served as ambassador to France. After this term he retired from the diplomatic service, and became president of the Royal Geographical Society, rector of the University of Edinburgh and the University of St. Andrews.

He received an honorary doctor of laws degree from the University of Glasgow in 1901.

During his later years, Dufferin suffered serious financial losses. Then his eldest son was killed in the Boer War. Dufferin himself died at his country house at Clandeboye on Feb. 12, 1902. He was survived for many years by his wife, who died on Oct. 25, 1926.

Dated 1878, Dominion of Canada $1 and $2 feature the popular couple. The Countess of Dufferin's portrait appears on the $1 note while the Earl of Dufferin is shown on the $2 bill. This issue was the first of many to feature portraits of a governor general and his wife, though the notes were not put into circulation until the summer of 1879, after the Dufferins had left Canada for their new posting. The notes bear on their backs the locality of the assistant receiver general's office where they were payable: Montreal, Toronto, Saint John, or Halifax. The name of the city also appears on the note's face.

The first of the $1 notes features a scalloped border. Upon discovery that counterfeiters were altering the notes to make them appear to be $4 bills, several design changes were made, including replacing the scalloped border with a lettered border. The word "ONE" was placed across the big numerical counters at each end of the note. If you should be lucky enough to have a $1 or $2 note of this series in your collection, take a moment to look at it closely and spare a thought for the distinguished diplomat, or his wife, depicted on it and the contributions this couple made to the development of Canada.

The 1878 Dominion of Canada $1 depicts the Countess of Dufferin.

By Peter Mosiondz, Jr.

Watching a remake of the old television show I've Got a Secret gave me the idea for this article. The memories of having visited so many uninformed numismatic widows provided additional fodder. The deceased, in the vast majority of incidents, left no instructions on the disposal of his or her coin collection. Let me tell you about a couple of incidents that I was involved in recently. In each instance it was the I've Got a Secret syndrome.

One of my neighbours passed away. I visited his grieving mother to pay my respects. As I was leaving she asked me, "Do you know anybody who buys coins? Joe was a coin collector and I don't know what to do with them." I told her that I would be very interested in seeing them and eventually made an offer that was happily accepted. What if she had not asked that question? What would have happened to the coin collection? My guess is that she may easily have been taken advantage of due to her lack of knowledge. No instructions were left by the son, even though he knew that I lived a few houses away and that I was a coin collector and dealer.

Then there was the time when I travelled to the home of the deceased's wife and her mother. They had all but made up their minds to sell to a local dealer who was called and made an offer for the collection. However, the widow found one of my business cards in her late husband's effects. She decided to have a second evaluation. After a couple of hours carefully examining the collection, I was able to make an offer of $3,000 which was immediately accepted. They then told me that that my offer was three times that of the local "dealer."

There are several reasons why the non-collecting half is kept in the dark. The chief ones among them are:

The collector, not wishing the spouse to know just how much was spent on the coin collection, intentionally played down its value.

The collector, perhaps in an effort to impress the better half with his or her numismatic acumen, intentionally overstated the value.

The collector did not know just how much had been spent over the years or did not care about the potential resale value. The pleasures of the hobby seemed ample enough for this individual. Hard to believe? Yet many share this outlook.

> "...be sure to tell your loved ones where to find your collection, inventory system, and appraisal."

Keep in mind that here is nothing more advantageous to the numismatist's heirs than when a reputable coin dealer is contacted by a well-informed widow or executor. Don't keep it a secret.

An accurate inventory of your coin collection goes hand in hand with a competent appraisal. Our article on obtaining a competent appraisal was recently published within these pages (Vol. 51; No. 7). For now, let's get the inventory started. It doesn't have to be complicated.

You don't have to itemize every inexpensive coin. Something on the order of "Approximately 200 circulated George VI cents and nickels in red plastic coffee can on the top shelf of office cabinet; Cost $50" is sufficient. This is entered in our inventory system.

I use the same system that has worked well for me for about six decades now, namely three-by-five-inch (7.7-by-12.7 centimetre) index cards. My rule of thumb is that I don't inventory any coin with an individual cost of less than $10. These low-cost coins are "jackpotted" on cards as described above.

My card for individual items with a cost of $10 and up looks something like the sample shown nearby.

The top line provides the denomination, date, and grade. The information contained on the bottom line is the date of purchase (month and year are sufficient for me), the source and the price paid. The centre area of the card is used for additional descriptions, when necessary, and the location of the item. In this example I can easily locate the coin if I need it. There are other ways to maintain an inventory. Some may prefer to develop a spreadsheet using computer software. Others may want a commercially available coin inventory program. Whatever method you decide, just do it and stay with it. You'll enjoy much greater piece of mind.

Remember to keep any data, whether card, computer data, or printout in a safe place away from the coins. And, most importantly, be sure to tell your loved ones where to find your collection, inventory system, and appraisal. I use a sealed envelope entitled "My Coins and What to do With Them." Have the contact information available for any dealers or auction houses whom you wish to handle your coins. These instructions can again be simple. Let's employ an example that we used earlier; "Red storage box #1 on top shelf of safe – send to XYZ Coin Co., followed by the contact info." And so it goes with everything else.

I would also ask you to consider leaving instructions that your books, supplies and lower-valued coins be donated to the young numismatists at your local coin club.

Until next time, stay well and enjoy your hobby.

Notes, tokens, coins bring strong bids in Toronto

By Bret Evans

The sale held in conjunction with the Oct. 3-4 Toronto Coin Expo brought smiles to the faces of the auctioneers.

"It was a good weekend," said Brian Bell, of Moncton-based Geoffrey Bell Auctions.

Among the highlights of the Canadian decimal section was the sale of lot 416, a 1921 fifty-cent piece, the "King of Canadian Coins," graded PCGS VG-10, for $45,600. The sale, which included fees, was in the middle of the pre-sale estimate of $40,000 to $45,000.

Another key date coin, a 1921 silver dollar in ICCS MS-65, estimated at $5,000 to $6,000, sold for $5,400.

"Decimal continues to be the way it has for years," Bell said. "Hot and cold in some areas, but still consistent."

Another area that did particularly well was Canadian chartered banknotes. One reason was because of the entry into the market of a new collector, who was an aggressive bidder for quality notes.

"We have had a new collector come into the market and he's a very serious collector," Bell said. "It is very encouraging to see that there is this kind of interest."

A 1921 fifty-cent piece, the 'King of Canadian Coins,' graded PCGS VG-10, sold for $45,600.

A highlight of the government money was lot 774, a pair of 1954 Bank of Canada notes with a solid seven nines serial number and the 10 million number note with the same prefix.

The combination is a scarce opportunity and was estimated at $6,000 to $7,500. However, Bell noted that bidding by two collectors saw the price climb to $13,200 before the lot was hammered down.

Bell said the second session, largely consisting of tokens, also saw spirited bidding.

"Overall it was very solid," Bell said.

He added that the sale of John Temple's collection over several sales, and the recent sale of the Ford collection of Canadian tokens, both saw strong bidding. That demand continued through this sale.

"The market for tokens is developing," he said. "People are willing to pay top dollar for what they really want and are confident that the market remains."

There was even a fair number of tokens from the Temple collection returning after just a short time, because a collector decided to dispose of his collection.

Among the highlights was lot 930a, an R.W. Owen Ropery token of Montreal (Breton No. 564) in ICCS F-15, which sold for $22,800, right in the $20,000 to $25,000 estimate. The same item appeared four years ago and sold for $20,000.

"That was a bit more than in our July 2009 sale, before the Temple and Ford collections were offered, so that market is strong," Bell said.

For more information on the sale, go to www.gbellauctions.com.

A pair of 1954 Bank of Canada notes, serial numbered 9999999 and 10000000, sold for $12,650 at the Toronto Coin Expo, doubling the pre-sale estimate.

Mint strikes upon more Caribbean business

It isn't often the Royal Canadian Mint announces a foreign customer, but several new issues with a Caribbean connection were announced in October.

According to Ian Bennett, master of the Royal Canadian Mint, the issues keep a long tradition of making coins for other nations, and build on the Mint's goal of increasing market share in world coin production.

"For the past 35 years, the Mint has proudly produced coins for over 75 countries and maintaining and expanding our international business through superior quality and customer service remains a top priority," he said.

The recent contracts include:

- Production of one-cent circulation coins for the Eastern Caribbean Central Bank. This represents a re-order for this denomination, with the bank being a customer of the Mint since 2008. The bank is the monetary authority of a group of eight independent Caribbean nations, namely Anguilla, Antigua and Barbuda, the Commonwealth of Dominica, Grenada, Montserrat, St. Kitts and Nevis, St. Lucia, and St. Vincent and the Grenadines.
- Production of five-cent circulation coins for the Central Bank of Barbados. The Mint has been working with the Central Bank of Barbados since 1978.
- The first numismatic coin contract with the Centrale Bank van Curaçao en Sint Maarten to produce painted nickel-silver coins to celebrate the fourth edition of the Curaçao North Sea Jazz Festival, which took place at the end of August.

The RCM is striking a painted coin to commemorate an event held this summer.

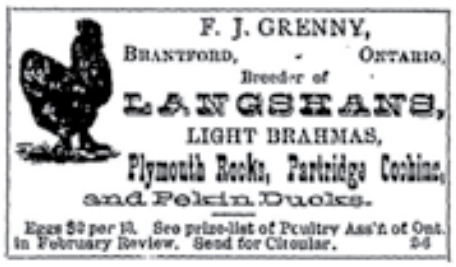
Grenny's diverse offerings included stamps, coins – and poultry

The World of MONEY

By Ted Banning

Stewart M. Thomson was by no means the only numismatist in Brantford, Ont., during the 1890s. He was preceded in Brantford by Frank Grenny, one of the most prominent coin and stamp dealers in Canada during the 1880s and early '90s. Frank used his position as a clerk in Brantford's post office to have preferred access to new stamp issues, but also ran a thriving numismatic dealership. Although one of the earliest Canadian members of the American Numismatic Association, he soon after dropped out of numismatics altogether and his fortunes waned in self-imposed exile to California.



An example of one of Grenny's ads showing his diverse interests.

Francis J. Grenny was born in Brantford, possibly on Oct. 13, 1840, although various sources place his birth as late as 1844. His parents were Abram Grenny, a Brantford merchant, and Margaret Pickle, the Cainsville postmistress and daughter of a Baptist minister. His paternal grandfather was probably Devonshire-born Abram Grenny, who served as second gunner and ship's corporal on a Lake Erie ship during the War of 1812, then able seaman on HMS Psyche, a fourth-rate frigate being built at Kingston, Upper Canada, from 1818 to 1820 under the command of Lt. William Henvey. The younger Abram Grenny may be the one the pay list as "boy" aboard HMS Kingston, a 56-gun fourth rate originally called HMS Prince Regent when launched at the Kingston Royal Naval Dockyard in April 1814, but renamed in December 1814. He settled in Brantford some time before 1840 and, in 1847, appeared on the assessment roll there.

Francis J. Grenny's own token.

In 1861, The Canadian Almanac and Repository of Useful Knowledge already listed the 20-year-old Frank J. Grenny as postmaster in Cainsville, a village on the eastern outskirts of Brantford, Canada West, although in 1864 Mitchell's Canada Gazetteer and Business Directory for 1864-65 listed his mother, Margaret Grenny, as Cainsville's postmistress. The County of Brant Gazetteer and Directory for 1865 lists Margaret as postmistress and Frank as her assistant. Presumably, it was around this time that Frank became interested in stamps, and possibly coins and tokens as well.

Frank also ran a dry goods business in Cainsville in the 1860s and, most likely, the post office was in the family store. By the late 1860s, Frank had accepted a position as postmaster of Preston, Ont.

Grenny also became involved in the militia. He joined as a private around 1858 and by 1866 he was colour sergeant in 38th Brantford Battalion (Dufferin Rifles). During the Fenian Raid on Fort Erie In June of that year, he was one of the guard that escorted Fenian prisoners to Brantford's jail in the face of an angry mob. In consequence of this service, Grenny belatedly received the General Service Medal with the "Fenian Raid 1866" bar in 1899.

By 1868, Grenny was the 38th's quartermaster and, on June 4, 1875, became paymaster of Brant Battalion, Dufferin Rifles. In 1883, he was honorary captain and, by 1885, had received promotion to major, while retaining his role as paymaster. On Oct. 11, 1888, he finally retired from the militia, with a regimental dinner in Brantford that The Canadian Militia Gazette and The Brantford Courier both recorded.

"There has been no more generally well-liked or hard-worked servant in Her Majesty's service than Major Grenny," reported the Courier. "His brother officers therefore thought it only fitting in connection with his retirement, after over thirty years' service, to make him the recipient of some mark of respect. … As an officer and a comrade they all knew and appreciated the worth of their retiring brother in arms, and he would be greatly missed by the regiment generally."

In November 1869, while he was postmaster in Preston, Grenny married Mary Ann (or Marion) Peatman, who was the daughter of the superintendant of the Mohawk Institute, a school for boys from the Six Nations Reserve. The couple had three sons, Henry, who apparentlly died in infancy, Frederick R., who later became manager of a New York drug store, and William Doyle, who became a steam engineer in California. They also had one daughter, Nina Llewellen, who married insurance-agent-turned-preacher, Arthur Whiteman.

Interestingly, some of the Grenny advertisements as early as 1887, and a charter membership in the Canadian Philatelic Association, are in Fred Grenny's name, indicating either that young Frederick was a precocious dealer in philately and numismatics or that Frank occasionally used "Fred" as an alias.

According to P.N. Breton, Frank Grenny began to act as a coin dealer in 1870, by which time he was employed as a clerk in Grenny was a philatelist and numismatist from Brantford, Ont.

Grenny's Brant Memorial medal from 1886.

Brantford's post office. However, in the ensuing years, he was known at least as much as a stamp dealer, with advertisements in practically every philatelic newsletter published in Canada during the 1880s: Canadian Philatelic Journal, Halifax Philatelist, Toronto Philatelic Journal, Dominion Philatelist, Philatelic Courier, The Gossip, and the Niagara Philatelist. He became a charter member of the American Philatelic Association in 1886 and of the Canadian Philatelic Association in 1887. In 1889, he attended the APA convention in St. Louis and exhibited his stamp collection at the Buffalo International Industrial Fair. As Clarence Manning described it in the American Philatelist, Grenny's exhibit "should be seen to be appreciated. It contains a complete set of Canadian proofs, Canada complete excepting the 12p black, a magnificent collection of Canadian revenues, and also fine collections of Newfoundland, New Brunswick, Mexico and Prince Edward Island, the majority of which were complete."

Grenny was also active in the administration of philatelic organizations, serving as APA's resident vice-president for Canada in 1890 and as exchange superintendant for both CPA and the Canadian Circuit of the APA exchange department. He seems to have resigned from the CPA exchange department about 1892 after some complaints about administration. He also attended the APA convention in Niagara Falls in 1892.

Grenny was an early member of the American Numismatic Association as well. He became a charter member in 1891, with membership No. 21, and served on the ANA's Board of Temporary Organization in that founding year. Almost immediately he began to advertise in The Numismatist.

In 1886, he provided the design for a medal commemorating the unveiling of Brantford's monument in honour of Joseph Brant (1742-1807). The dies were executed by P.W. Ellis & Co. in Toronto, and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows aided with distribution. Many of his subsequent advertisements listed this medal, usually in bronze, available for 20 cents. There were also some struck in pewter.

Grenny also issued a "numismatist's card," ostensibly a 50-cent trade token (Breton 836 and Frey 54), sometime after 1888 but before 1894, when it appeared in Breton's catalog. There were 50 in each of copper, brass, nickel, and aluminum. According to Albert Frey's October 1906 article in The Numismatist, Grenny sold them at $4 a set.

Like some other coin dealers, Grenny published lists. His Catalogue of Scarce Communion Tokens Used by Presbyterian Churches of the Dominion of Canada appeared some time after 1891, since it cites McLachlan's work, but certainly much earlier than the 1899 publication date that libraries tend to give for it. Most likely it was 1892 or '93, when Grenny was winding down his stock. Frey also mentions that Grenny "issued a little catalogue, still occasionally met with giving the prices and values of the principal coins and tokens of the United States and Canada." To date I have been unable to find surviving examples of this catalogue.

Grenny had a number of other public roles, including serving as a deputy returning officer for Ward 3 when Brantford held a referendum on bylaws regarding the Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo Railway. Like S.M. Thomson, Grenny was a member and served as grand master of Harmony Lodge No. 115 of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in Brantford.

But you may be surprised to learn that his other major hobby was poultry. Grenny sold and exhibited Brahmas, Plymouth Rocks, Imperial Pekin Ducks, but especially Langshan chickens and their eggs, advertising frequently in the Canadian Poultry Review. He published an article advocating cheaper egg incubators in The Pet-Stock, Pigeon and Poultry Bulletin in August 1880, and subsequently manufactured and distributed the Eureka Incubator and Brooder. In 1882, he was treasurer of the Ontario Poultry Association, and in 1885 he hosted the Ontario Poultry Association's (OPA) Show in Brantford, which appears to have resulted in a drawn-out dispute over prize money. In 1886 he had a lawsuit against the OPA. The Ontario Provincial Court seems to have awarded F.J. Grenny and his wife $1,041 in November 1895 to settle this dispute.

Whether this suit was at the heart of it or not, there appear to have been major stresses and strains in the Grenny household during the early 1890s that led to a separation between Frank and Marion some time around 1896. Frank wound down his numismatic collection, attempting to sell the communion tokens through his little catalogue and in advertisements. Although he was still soliciting coins and tokens in July 1893 in The Numismatist, he finally sold his entire collection through Ed Frossard's auction No. 119 on Oct. 10 and 11, 1893.

The catalogue from this auction documents Grenny's collection extremely well. But the auction also brought some disappointing returns, especially for the 161 communion tokens that were sold in a single lot for $12.80, far less than Grenny

Errors & VARIETIES

By John Regitko

Judging by the number of people that bring interesting, unusual – and ridiculous – listings of errors and varieties on the Internet to my attention, there seems to be quite a bit of fascination for the weird and fictitious information that other people publish as fact. This could involve outlandish descriptions, ridiculously high pricing or outright fiction.

Following are some of the website listings brought to my attention by Kathy R. and Ralph T. Ralph was a member of the executive of the Coin Irregularity Association of Canada during its existence in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

1953 ONE-CENT BROKEN DIE

The write-up states: "Rare Vintage 1953 Canadian Small Cent (1 Cent). This is an unbelievable specimen of a broken die, the break is over 50% of the coin. It is absolutely impossible to get, consider to be very very rare. These coins will bring thousands of dollars in auctions, and collectors very rarely sell. It is considered to be ones (sic) in a life time find!!!! Extremely rare!!! Very sought after by collectors. Hard to find item."

The whole write-up is in capital letters, with some of the text about its rarity in red for additional emphasis.

With such emphasis on its rarity, no wonder the "buy-it-now" price is $1,650US. The cause of the error that is stated would indeed make it worth a considerable amount.

Except there are a few problems with the description.

I don't mean to quibble over the fact that it states that such an error is "absolutely impossible to get" for an item that he proves is not impossible to get by virtue of his listing, or the use of overblown marketing terminology such as ... well, just about every word that is used. The main problem is that the description as to its cause is absolutely wrong.

If it was an error as a result of such a fantastic example of a broken die, that is one thing. But since it is nothing more than one of thousands of laminations that exist (an imperfect blank, not an imperfect die), it reduces its value to a few per cent of the asking price.

As I have done on a few previous occasions, I am putting my money where my belief lies: if the owner sends the coin to CCCS and they agree that the error is as the owner states, I will reimburse the owner for the cost of authentication.

1982 $1 STRUCK ON FOREIGN PLANCHET

Figure 2, an item listed by "4thunderbay" of Thunder Bay, Ont., covers a 1981 $1 coin that, according to the PCGS certification, was struck on a foreign planchet weighing 5.5 grams.

Four offers had been received against the "buy-it-now" price of $3,000US, but the amount of each offer is not revealed. I would not use the wording "a super great investment" at that price, unless the owner is talking about the investment he himself made if he sells it anywhere near this price.

Figure 2. This 1982 Constitution dollar was struck on a smaller 5.5-gram blank intended for a foreign coin.

1974 $1 WITH DOUBLE YOKE

Figure 3 shows a coin listed on eBay by "silvercricket131" out of Woodbury, Conn. It covers the Variety #1 of a 1974 specimen nickel dollar graded by NGC in SP-66.

Part of the owner's description reads: "One of 3 graded by NGC with the error! This is the Double Ox Yoke Variety #1 (the right post above the post – very obvious). NGC has not put the doubling on the label because not enough have been found!"

This description is very confusing to me.

First of all, how does the seller know that three have been graded by NGC with this error if they do not identify it on the authentication label and, therefore, I assume, in their records?

Then there is the claim that the reason for NGC not putting the doubling on the label is because not enough have been found. This doesn't make any sense, since Numismatic Guaranty Corporation is known to have graded numerous other virtually unique items (such as double-headed coins, just to name one). I doubt that they would let PCGS, ANACS, ICG and others reap the benefit of being the first out the gate on new discoveries.

According to the NGC website, they have graded a total of eleven 1974 $1 pieces, of which four were in SP-66. I found no record on the NGC website of any of them being identified as a Yoke variety, which reinforced my question about this seller knowing that three have been so identified.

Or is it hype to obtain the $2,500 "buy-it-now" price?

1981 ONE-CENT THIN PLANCHET

The eBay listing in Figure 4 by "malex54321" from Saint-Hubert, Que. consists of a 1981 one-cent coin struck on a thin planchet. It is described as "unique." I would like to know how the owner knows that in order to make such a claim. Is it a case of Internet jargon that means that if I claim that I have never seen one then it doesn't exist?

He makes the comment: "Most of the error coins are found in change, but this one was preserved over 30 years in its original roll."

From my personal experience and knowledge, most errors have been found in rolls, because that is where collectors look for them, not in change. The coin dealer who bills himself as "The Coin Collector" goes through something like 500 to 600 rolls per month, while another dealer runs at more than 200 rolls a month. Another collector is known to go through a box regularly. These dealers would not waste their time if they came up blank consistently.

Although new readily-seen-by-the-naked-eye errors hardly ever appear these days and old stock is mainly in collectors' hands and not coming on the market, I suspect the "buy-it-now" price of $2,300 is more than collectors are willing to pay for the coin.

One other comment made in the listing is that the coin, being about half the thickness of a regular 1981 cent, is "so thin that I'm sure I could fold it!"

It reminds me of a YouTube video showing a very thin Canadian 1984 cent under the heading "One of the rarest mint error coins ever!" The video is the owner's way of "bragging" about his dad's find.

A viewer of the video asked how much it would be worth because he had two of them. The owner responded: "You have two? From the same year as mine as thin as mine? I doubt that. You full of s---! Mine is thinner than a sheet of paper and not acid washed."

Another viewer states: "Whoa! That Canada coin is 'super thin'! It's so thin that it can 'cut' my fingers."

The owner replies: "I shave with it ... guaranteed. I can slice and dice ya with this bad boy! You should learn how to shave, you have to drag the coin across your face a little nicer, practice with a balloon! I shave with my dad's penny all the time and don't have any problems! LOL."

"Coinalk 72" gets into the act with: "Crap, my penny just cut me!"

I am glad to see that others can have some fun in this hobby, although it is at the expense of the owner who thinks that his coin is worth $30,000, lives in denial that anyone else would have another, others could be as thin as his, or dismisses others by resorting to name calling.

Figure 3. Although the fact that it is a Double Yoke #1 variety is not shown on the NGC label, it makes little difference since examination of the coin will confirm this to the buyer.

Figure 5. The author wonders if buying an opened roll of 1964 five-cent coins for $39.99, that the seller acknowledges has been inspected, is a good bet for finding any errors or worthwhile varieties.

ROLL OF 1964-5 CENT COINS - POTENTIAL ERRORS?

A listing by "clifford5758" of Parry Sound, Ont., shown in Figure 5, is for "1 roll (40 coins) of uncirculated Canadian 1964-5 cent coins – potential errors?" It states in the body that there are many more potential errors other than the 1964 coins with the extra waterline.

"These coins do not have the extra waterline though. I have checked them all in that regard as that error is real rare. I checked for that one error but I don't have the time or patience to check for the numerous other mint errors."

He includes quite a long list of the errors that could potentially be in the roll. Note the use of the words "potential errors" in the listing's heading, followed by a question mark.

At a "buy-it-now" price of $39.99, that works out to $1 per coin. That is for 40 coins that, by his own admission, have been examined. And for the best defect yet!

We are expected to believe that the seller has turned a blind eye to other errors that he knows exist.

I mean, when you look for a reasonably small detail such as a waterline, would you not see off-centres, clips of all types, double strikes, broadstrikes, partial and full brockages, laminations, die cracks, die edge breaks and more? Would you put them back into the roll because you are "checking for that one error" but you "don't have the time or patience to check for the numerous other mint errors?"

If I advertised unopened Mint-rolled 2006 Canadian one-cent coins as "potentially containing the rare combinations of magnetic/non-magnetic blanks, mint marks and composition marks, for $39.99 per roll, would you gamble that they could contain coins worth up to $500 or more each in value?

Now let me ask you this: would you send me $39.99 if I told you that I inspected each and every coin in the roll, but was only looking for, say, clashed dies?

The listing by "clifford5758" includes: "Returns: 7 days money back, buyer pays return shipping If you don't find any errors."

Returning the roll might be worth considering if you don't find anything or some minor varieties, because your loss of the shipping cost would be less than keeping the roll.

If I advertised a money-back guarantee if you don't find any errors, I might consider "seeding" the roll to make sure you found a couple of low-value varieties (but not errors of any value). I am not accusing "clifford5758" of doing that. I'm just stating what I might consider doing.

13 CANADA COMMEMORATES THE 1813 BATTLE OF CRYSLER'S FARM AND BATTLE OF CHÂTEAUGUAY SPECIAL 1 KILOGRAM GOLD COIN

Item #13217

$69,000.00

The War of 1812 was a 32-month military conflict between the United States and the British Empire (now Canada). This coin commemorates two battles that were fought and won by the British Empire; The Battle for Crysler's Farm (also known as the Battle of Crysler's Field) and The Battle of the Chateauguay. The Battle for Crysler's Farm was fought on November 11, 1813 near Cornwall, Ontario. The Battle of the Chateauguay was fought on October 26, 1813 in Allan's Corners, near present-day Ormstown, Quebec.

These two historic battles caused the Americans to abandon the Saint Lawrence Campaign, their major strategic effort in the autumn of 1813.

This special coin, with a special limited mintage of only 10 worldwide (a first for the RCM kilogram gold coins!), is struck in pure .9999 fine gold, and weighs 1 kilogram (1000 grams). The coin features renditions of two historic paintings of each of the two battles, with a map of the region separating the two.

U.S. dealer offers exclusive Canadian $2 Devil's Brigade coins

By Bret Evans

The Royal Canadian Mint has issued two versions of the Devil's Brigade gold and silver coins, exclusively for United States precious metals dealer Goldline International.

The Devil's Brigade was the unofficial name of the First Special Service Force, a Canada and United States joint military force formed during the Second World War.

The all-volunteer unit was composed of more than 2,000 men, who were trained in stealth, airborne, mountain and amphibious operations. The unit was first deployed to the Aleutian Islands, and later saw service in Italy and Southern France, at one time maintaining contact with the enemy for 90 consecutive days.

The force is considered the ancestor of modern special forces such as Canada's Joint Task Forces, the United States Navy SEALs, and Delta Force.

This past summer, the Mint released gold and silver $5 coins honouring the unit. Other than the denomination, the designs of the new coins are identical to the earlier coins.

The reverse design, by Ardell Bourgeois, shows a star and maple leaf, symbols of the two countries, with a Devil's Brigade insignia, a spearhead and crossed arrows emblazoned with the words Canada and USA.

Both the gold and silver coins have a face value of $5.

The Mint did not announce the production of the two new coins, both of which have a face value of $2. Offered only through Goldline, the firm's website proclaims them as an exclusive issue.

The gold coin has a weight of one-quarter ounce, diameter of 20 mm, and purity of .9999. The silver coin has a weight of three-quarters of an ounce, diameter of 38 mm, and purity of .9999.

There was no indication of a mintage limit for the $2 versions.

U.S. precious metals dealer Goldline International is selling Canadian Devil's Brigade coins with a $2 face value, which have the same designs as earlier $5 face value coins offered by the Royal Canadian Mint.

Grenny...

had been asking in his booklet, which had priced them individually in the range of 20 cents to $4 each. Grenny's was a very complete collection of Canadian and Maritime colonial tokens, some of its highlights being a set of bouquet sous, most of them uncirculated, that sold in total for $17.64; a Repentigny bridge token (Leroux 589) that sold for $12.50 and another (Leroux 595) that sold for $10.50; a Bank of Montreal 1839 "side-view" half-penny that brought $6.25; an 1815 Magdalen Island penny token in VF that sold for $3.10; a Wellington "Cossack Penny Token" (Leroux 805) that sold for $4; a Montreal & Lachine Railway token that realized $2.25; and a Leslie & Sons two-penny that sold for $3.50. A complete set of Hudson's Bay Company Esquimault tokens in EF sold for $6.40. Another gem was a 1670 5 sols of Louis XIV for French America in EF; it sold for $10. In all, the Canadian portion of Grenny's collection netted him not much more than $200. It is unclear how much of the remainder of the lots were Grenny's, as a good deal of the catalogue is not explicitly attributed to either Grenny or William Poillon, the other major consignor.

According to the 1894 and 1895 Brantford directories, for some reason the 55-year-old Grenny was no longer working at the post office, but rather as bookkeeper for Thomas Elliott, a coal and cement dealer who would be Brantford's mayor in 1896-97.

Then, probably in 1897, Grenny left Brantford and headed to California, where he made the most of his poultry experience to set up a Los Angeles poultry firm, Grenny & Mackintosh, although Albert Frey thought, erroneously as the directories show, that Grenny had made the move in late 1893. By weird coincidence, Grenny's 1900 entry in the Los Angeles Directory is directly opposite that of Lewis Greenslade, another Ontario coin and stamp dealer who "escaped" to California under mysterious circumstances, and met a very similar end. Marion Grenny moved in with her daughter and son-in-law at 96 Edmonds St. in Toronto, and later moved to Calgary, where she was living on 10th Ave. NE in 1916. She died there in October 1930.

Grenny & Mackintosh appears to have been in business in Los Angeles until at least 1904. By 1909, however, neither Grenny nor his partner, Donald Mackintosh, appears in the Los Angeles directory anymore. In 1910, according to the United States Census, Grenny was in Alpaugh, a small farming community north of Los Angeles, where he was farming vegetables and seeds. From there, his fortunes seem to have slipped further.

The 1920 U.S. Census shows that Frank J. Grenny, in a trajectory not dissimilar to that of Lewis Greenslade, was an inmate of the County Farm at Downey, Los Angeles, also known as the Los Amigos Medical Center. This was a place where poor, mentally ill Californians ended up, and was operated by Los Angeles County Department of Charities. According to the 1923 History of Los Angeles County, the facility "contains four hundred acres of fine farm land, 210 acres of which are now being cultivated. … The daily average attendance, including 225 harmless insane persons, is a total of 766." It is now an eerily abandoned facility haunted by memories of the unfortunates who once resided there. Frank Grenny was one of these.

Grenny died on Nov. 4, 1923, at the age of 79, forgotten by his former comrades in philately and numismatics. As his main numismatic legacy, we find his Brant Memorial medal and his token. It was not a celebrated end to this otherwise remarkable individual.

Grenny's position as a clerk in the Brantford post office gave him access to ready material to collect.

TRENDS

By Sean Isaacs

Focus on: Canadian large cents

Canadian Coin News Trends is an estimate of retail values of the items listed, based on dealer sales, wholesale prices, auction results and precious metal prices. It assumes that coins are free of damage, problem-free and correctly graded, and that the buyer and seller have equal knowledge and motivation. The estimates contained on these pages are meant as a guide only, since exact values are set by buyers and sellers in fair negotiation.

Welcome back to Trends. In this edition I have taken a renewed look through the large cent section, and applied a few selected pricing changes where deemed appropriate.

Here we are, a full year down the road after the official demise of the Canadian penny, or one cent, and – far from fading into obscurity – this charter member of the Canadian decimal family only becomes increasingly complex and enlightening.

By complex and enlightening, I refer to a number of factors that while not exclusive to the large cents, do combine to keep collectors of this series on their toes. First off, the sheer number of coins that are now recognized in this series has grown markedly in recent years, thanks to the keen eyes and ongoing research of copper enthusiasts.

Trends...

No where else is this more clearly evident than in the early 1859 issue itself, where until fairly recently most people collected with a target of five or six core varieties. Today, Trends now lists a dozen distinct varieties for the date, which is not surprising given the Charlton catalogue's assertion that more than 400 dies were created for this final Province of Canada issue. Naturally CCN must continue to be carefully selective on the nature and number of varieties that are added to the Trends listings, however these "new" 1859 and later varieties have all passed through a vetting process, and deemed to be both distinct and – perhaps most importantly – duplicable. Whether cause or effect is sometimes hard to determine, however many dealers including myself have observed some keen interest in these large cent varieties and Trends prices will likely remain fluid as the hobby works towards establishing the true scarcity of these coins.

One "anchor" rarity among the large cents, namely the 1859 brass, has once again been increased in all grades. We strive, wherever possible, to adjust our evaluations based on actual market activity rather than speculation, and the recent private treaty sale of a Fine-15 brass for the cash and trade equivalent of $40,000 reaffirms both the inadequacy of previous Trends levels, as well as the status of this variety as among the very top of the major Canadian decimal rarities.

Recent auction results suggest a continued healthy appetite for gem large cents, with full Red examples continuing to yield reasonable prices that would have been unheard of a few years ago. Readers will note that a small number of dates have been slightly reduced in the highest MS-65 grades, however, as prices for these examples appear to be a few paces ahead of current market, especially given reasonable certified populations.

Referencing once again my earlier comment on the complexity of this series, it must of course be acknowledged that the one cent series is unique among all other denominations, in that any Mint State grade includes necessarily a colour/lustre component. Thus, two technically identical coins – one with Red lustre, the other perhaps Red-Brown – will almost certainly have significantly different appeal to collectors and thus subsequent market value. While it cannot be denied that some U.S. grading companies now assign enhanced grading values based on the eye-appeal of silver coinage, the dual assessment of grade and lustre/toning has generally been unique to the copper decimal issues. This assertion will be fundamentally basic to most collectors, however I remind readers of this to emphasize that Trends valuations at the higher grade levels can be significantly affected by the quality and depth of red lustre, and indeed, is premised upon specific standards of toning. A 70 per cent Red large cent is simply not comparable to a 95 per cent Red example of the same date, just as one certification company's Red is not necessarily the Red of another. A careful assessment of a coin's originality and quality of lustre is essential in determining true desirability and value, and collectors should not be surprised to see Full Red specimens vary widely on occasion from current Trends valuations, as demand for such gems remains quite fluid.

On a closing note, I would like to add my own personal expression of condolence to the friends and family of Jim Charlton, whose very presence at our many shows over the years reminds us of the nobility and enduring fraternity of our hobby. He will be missed, though his legacy will live on.

Wishing all our readers a refreshing and colourful fall.

Yours in Numismatics
Sean Isaacs

LATEST news about the five 1968 nickel fifty cent coins, which have been graded and authenticated by ICCS. Four coins are MS63 with one MS64. There are two different finishes, mirror and matte. There are two different 8's. There are three different 5's. There are three different size beads on the obverse. There is very strong doubling on all the coins. I wish to keep the group together as they are more exciting in this manner. For photos and information write to Douglas Spraggett, 205-1922 Pandosy St., Kelowna, BC V1Y 1R5.

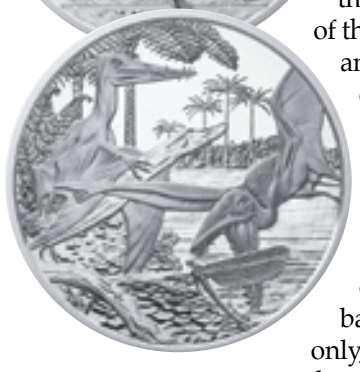
ROMANOVS REMEMBERED

Pobjoy Mint has announced the release of a series of four coins commemorating the 400th anniversary of the establishment of Russia's Romanov dynasty. The House of Romanov was the last dynasty to rule over the vast expanses of the Russian Empire. Established in 1613, the dynasty continued until the overthrow of the last czar, Nicholas the Second, in 1917. To commemorate the anniversary, four coins have been issued by the British Virgin Islands, each showing a portrait of a different member of the Romanov dynasty with a building associated with that particular ruler. Beneath the design is a Russian eagle that contains the value and the dates for each member of the Romanov dynasty. The rulers include Peter the Great, Catherine the Great, Alexander I and Nicholas II. Available in cupro-nickel and silver, they measure 38.6 millimetres in diameter and weigh 28.28 grams. The cupro-nickel coins will be struck to demand, but the .999 silver pieces have a limited mintage of 10,000. The coins may also be available with the buildings coloured by contacting the mint directly. For more information, visit www.pobjoy.com.

MAKER OF MYTHOLOGY

The Perth Mint and Australia Post have joined together to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the birth of German naturalist and explorer Friedrich Wilhelm Ludwig Leichhardt (1813-c. 1848), an explorer and naturalist whose mysterious disappearance in the Australian outback is part of both nations' mythology. Leichhardt undertook three major expeditions, the last of which was an ill-fated attempt to cross the continent east-west from the Condamine River to the Swan River. This resulted in the disappearance of Leichhardt and his entire party, of which no remains have ever been found. Leichhardt's legacy includes his contribution to the natural sciences in Australia, detailed in his field books, notebooks, journals and diaries. Issued as Australian legal tender, the Uncirculated aluminium-bronze coin's reverse features Leichhardt and a line superimposed on a map of northeast Australia, indicating the route of his most famous expedition to Port Essington on the Cobourg Peninsula. As well as the Perth Mint's "P" mint mark, the design includes the inscriptions "LUDWIG LEICHHARDT," 1813 and 1848. The coin's obverse depicts the Rank-Broadley effigy of the Queen, the monetary denomination and 2013 year-date. The stamp and coin cover include two stamps affixed to the envelope, one issued by Germany and the other by Australia Post for the value of 60 cents. The German stamp is postmarked in Berlin and the Australia Post stamp is postmarked for the first day of issue. The envelope includes Australia Post's seal of authenticity and official number. For more information, visit www.perthmint.com.

JURASSIC APP



The Austrian Mint has issued the second in the five-coin series featuring prehistoric life, continuing the adventure with dinosaurs and early life in the water, on land, and in the air of midwestern Europe, from the Triassic to the Quaternary period. The reverse of the coin features a dynamic scene of what life may have been like during the Jurassic period. A pair of large flying Rhamphorhynchus is depicted hunting a giant dragonfly at the water's edge. The lush tropical vegetation climate is seen in the background, including ferns and palm tree-like cycads. The reverse of the coin was designed and engraved by Helmut Andexlinger. The obverse of the coin depicts the Rhamphorhynchus, with its long tail, broad wingspan and needle-like teeth angled forward in its snout, along with a fossil of the creature shown embedded in the earth. Below the fossil is the timeline detailing the Jurassic period from 200 million to 145 million years ago. Designed by mint engraver Thomas Pesendorfer, the obverse also includes the country of issue, "Republik Oesterreich," the year of issue, 2013, and the face value of €20. A unique gateway to the fascinating world of prehistoric life, a free augmented reality app provides in-depth background information and brings the long-extinct creatures back to life in moving images. The new coin is available in Proof finish-only, contains 18 grams of .900 Fine silver, weighs 20 grams, and has a diameter of 34 mm. The maximum mintage for each coin of this series is 50,000. For more information about the coin and the app, visit www.eurocollections.com.

'BANJO' BARD FETED

Andrew Barton "Banjo" Paterson (1864-1941) is renowned as an Australian bush poet, but he was also a solicitor, journalist, war correspondent, soldier and author. Paterson grew up in rural New South Wales, which engendered a lifelong love of the Australian bush and its characters. His most notable poems include Waltzing Matilda, The Man from Snowy River and Clancy of the Overflow. Celebrating his birth and lifelong achievements, the Perth Mint has introduced three commemorative coins, including a five-ounce silver coin with a limited mintage of 250, issued as legal tender under the Australian Currency Act 1965. The reverse depicts a scene from the ballad The Man from Snowy River in colour. A photographic portrait of Paterson is fringed by banksia flowers, his signature, and the inscription "A.B. 'BANJO' PATERSON 1864-1941." The Perth Mint's "P" mint mark is incorporated in the design. The obverse depicts the Ian Rank-Broadley effigy of Queen Elizabeth II, the 2014 year-date and the monetary denomination. For more information, visit www.perthmint.com.

Special goose takes love, pennies south for winter

Numismatic PROFILE

By Carolyn Mullin

Calgary filmmaker Lisa Fryklund has become obsessive about pennies, but only now that they are gone from circulation in Canada.

Her obsession took shape this past summer, around the same time that she received the necessary papers to join her American husband and start her new life in Alameda, Calif.

Married two years ago, she has been separated from husband Robert Ferguson, awaiting permanent resident status. When she finally received the news, she wanted to find a way to symbolize her love for Ferguson, and to represent her flight south to start a new life.

The end result of that planning and dreaming took the shape of a steel sculpture named Penny the Goose, which debuted this summer at the Burning Man arts festival in the Black Rock Desert, Nev.,

Resembling a Canadian goose, Penny boasts a 5.8-metre wingspan, stands 3.4 metres high, and its back is covered in 100,000 Canadian one-cent coins.

The bird was displayed to the 60,000 visitors of the week-long arts festival, where Fryklund and Ferguson first met and fell in love back in 2008.

In fact, for the past four years they have created and exhibited something that symbolizes their love, including a giant candy box, a three-layered wedding cake, and now, Penny.

Built over four months at Ferguson's welding shop, Penny is made of recycled steel beams, sheet metal and more than $1,000 in Canadian pennies collected from friends' piggy banks or rescued from meltdown. The goal was to show the goose in motion, in the landing position, with wings spread.

"I didn't want it to look like a duck decoy or anything, all stiff and still," explains Fryklund. "I wanted it to look like there was some sort of action going on."

Robert Ferguson and Lisa Fyrklund celebrate the debut of Penny the Goose at the Burning Man arts festival.

After sorting the one-cent coins into three different shades, Fryklund glued on each one by hand, maple leaf side up with the word 'Canada' at the bottom.

From the time the project was first conceived, Fryklund started sorting about 100 pennies each night, dividing them into shiny, medium and dark patinas, in order to mimic the shading and layering of feathers on the wings.

"If there are any art lessons to learn from this, I thought to myself that we would learn about shading and about how to make something look like it's in motion."

Each cent is laid maple leaf side up, with the word "Canada" on the bottom, a design that creates the feathered pattern. "As I laid each penny, I wondered about each one's story in the pockets, purses and palms of many Canadians."

It took a day to set up Penny at Burning Man, where it was immediately surrounded by people posing for pictures, all wanting to touch the giant metal Canada goose.

The couple doesn't know where the structure will finally land – there are requests to place it at other festivals and Burning Man may have it displayed in art museums – but Fryklund believes that in the end, Penny will end up on display outside Ferguson's welding shop.

Of course, if there are funds provided or partnerships created, Penny could be displayed in Canada, too. The sculpture needs to be transported by a flatbed truck in four pieces, and it weighs about one tonne, so the costs involved are holding back any thoughts of a debut north of the border, for now.

In the meantime, the artful duo has already started work on next year's Burning Man project, which also happens to be made with coins.

The couple's friends all over both countries are being asked to empty their piggy banks of any denomination of coins. They plan is to create a large piggy bank, probably about eight feet (2.4 metres) wide and 10 to 12 feet (three to 3.6 metres) long, also made of steel.

"We were originally thinking just about pennies, but if we can figure out the shading, we would look for all sorts of de-

Shiny, dull and dark pennies layered in rows combines to give the illusion of the feathers on the wing.

More than 60,000 visitors had a chance to see and touch Penny during the weeklong Burning Man arts festival in the Black Rock Desert.

nominations, and not just Canadian, any denomination and coins from any country."

They plan to make perforations in the steel, and glue down the coins around the perforations, so that depending on where the desert sun shines, light will show through during the day, and it can be illuminated within at night.

Fryklund has become a coin collector along the way, starting for now with a collection of one-cent Canadian coins. From her daily sorting she has learned that pennies from the 1920s seem to be the rarest, she says. She also came across a bonus recently, after buying $25 in what should have been all Canadian pennies from a bank.

"I dumped out the bag and I saw this odd-looking one. Turned out it was an 1888 Indian head penny from the States."

This hobby is full of interesting people and we'd love to help our readers get to know more of them.

a daily reminder of their contributions to the freedoms we enjoy today."

The coin, designed by Silvia Pecota, shows a Canadian soldier in the foreground and a United Nations observation post and a second soldier in the background. A highlight of the coin is the application of blue enamel to the soldier's beret, to give it the distinctive colour that signifies peacekeepers.

A total of 8,500 $20 coins have been produced on .9999 silver blanks. The coins have a diameter of 38 millimetres and weight of 31.39 grams.

The force in Cyprus was established to prevent a recurrence of fighting between Greek and Turkish Cypriots. Canada was among the first nations to contribute soldiers to Cyprus, and Canadians remain there today. The headquarters is the appropriately named Blue Beret Camp, at Nicosia International Airport.

Modern peacekeeping is the result of an initiative by then future Canadian prime minister Lester B. Pearson to ensure a ceasefire declared following the 1956 Suez Crisis, a war between the alliance of United Kingdom, France, and Israel against Egypt, would be honoured. Canadians were among the soldiers committed to the job.

Because Canadian uniforms at that time were almost identical to those worn by the United Kingdom, a "UN blue" beret was adopted to show their neutrality. It has since become the colour worn by all UN peacekeepers.

Pearson's resolve that soldiers could be warriors for peace earned him a Nobel Peace Prize in 1957.

Canada has been a participant in many peacekeeping operations around the world.

In 1995, Canadian peacekeeping was honoured with a circulating $1 coin. That coin, which depicts the Peacekeeping Monument in Ottawa, was unveiled at Lester Pearson High School in Ottawa, at a ceremony involving members of the Canadian Armed Forces and the Pearson family.

Designed by Silvia Pecota, a new $20 silver coin shows Canadian peacekeepers in Cyprus, with blue enamel used to highlight the force's distinctive beret.

Giant coin featuring Carr detail among Mint's latest offerings

By Bret Evans

The Royal Canadian Mint has issued another totem pole coin, this time a massive five-kilogram silver coin with a diameter of 180 centimetres.

The coin, which is struck in .9999 silver, features a detail from Tsatsisnukomi, BC, 1912, a painting by Canadian artist Emily Carr. The reverse side shows a large bird feature.

The long process of creating the high-relief coin took two engravers, Christie Pacquet and Stan Witten, to complete. First it required three weeks of hand sculpting before a die could be cut. The cutting process took 75 hours for each side of the coin. After hardening, it took a further week to hand burnish the die before hardening. Then the die was hand polished using sandblasting and masking to create both shiny and frosted areas to accent the design.

A mere 180 coins, which are sold encased in an acrylic box, were struck.

Born in Vancouver in 1871, Carr studied art in Canada, California, England and France. By the end of the First World War she was recognized as a Canadian talent and was able to paint full time, finally reaching national stature at the age of 57. In 1937, at the age of 66, she had a severe heart attack and was unable to continue painting. She turned to writing and authored five books.

Canada's previous totem pole coin was the 1958 silver dollar, struck to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the gold rush and establishment of British Columbia as a British colony.

The reverse design, by Stephen Trenka shows a totem pole with a raven on top. It was called the "death dollar," because a raven is considered in some cultures to be a symbol of death.

ARMS OF THE NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

The coat of arms series continues with a $300 gold coin for the Northwest Territories.

Dating back to 1956, the arms show a compass rose for the north with two narwhals.

A $300 gold coin shows the coat of arms for the Northwest Territories.

The shield beneath shows the Arctic sea and polar ice cap, as well as a tree line separating trees from tundra. Other elements show the resources of the north, gold and an Arctic fox. As with the other territory, Yukon, it does not have a motto or a royal crown.

The 50-millimetre (diameter) coin has a weight of 60 grams and is struck in 14-karat (.5833) gold. The mintage is 500 coins.

FINAL EAGLE COIN LANDS

The final release in the four-coin bald eagle set shows a mother eagle protecting her eaglets.

The one-ounce $20 coin is struck in .9999 silver, with a diameter of 38 mm and weight of 31.39 grams. Designed by Claudio D'Angelo, who created the other three coins, it has a mintage of 7,500.

Most commonly associated with the United States, the bald eagle is native to Canada. The largest bird of prey in this country, and the only eagle exclusive to North America, they can survive nearly 30 years in the wild and even longer in captivity. Eagles take about five years to reach maturity, and usually take a mate for life. The female lays between one and three eggs, and usually takes the role of lead incubator. After hatching, the female spends about a month protecting and keeping the eaglets warm while the male hunts and brings back food to the nest.

The second coin in the Mint's $3 animal architects series depicts an orb-weaver spider.

In Canada, bald eagles are most common on the Pacific Coast, but smaller populations exist in the Prairies, northern Ontario, Cape Breton Island, and Newfoundland. At-risk populations exist in southern Ontario and New Brunswick.

ORB-WEAVER SPINS A WEB ON $3

The second coin in the $3 series of animal architects shows the orb-weaver spider.

The .9999 silver coin has a diameter of 27 mm and weight of 7.96 grams. The mintage limit is 10,000.

Designer Yves Bérubé shows the orb-weaver, so named because it builds circular webs, starting from a single line originating from a tree or vertical surface. Orb-weavers can produce up to eight different types of threads, some sticky and some not sticky. The webs themselves start off as semi-crystalline liquid proteins and are transformed to filaments.

SML TURNS 25

The 25th anniversary of the silver maple leaf (SML) is the subject of two coins.

A $5 silver piedfort, a term used to describe a thicker-than-usual coin, shows a group of leaves with the 25 years mark in the lower-left quadrant. The design is by Jean Louis Sirois.

The piedfort coin has a purity of .9999, diameter of 34 mm and weight of 31.39 grams, the same weight as a regular SML, but with a smaller diameter. The coin has the same physical specifications as the previous silver piedfort maple leaf issued in 2010.

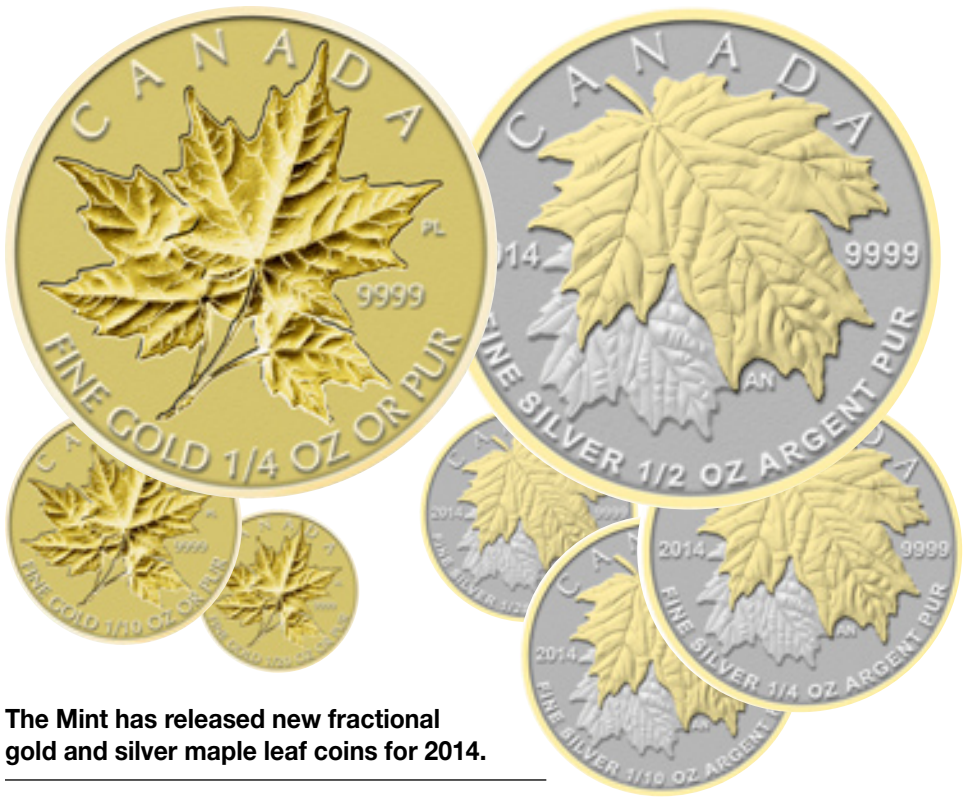
The fourth and final coin in the bald eagle series shows a mother protecting her eaglets.

The Mint has marked the silver maple leaf's 25th anniversary with a silver piedfort coin and an SML with selective gold plating.



The Mint has released new fractional gold and silver maple leaf coins for 2014.

The mintage limit is 10,000 coins.

The second anniversary product is a five-ounce silver maple leaf with selective gold plating.

Again, the coin is designed by Sirois and departs from the regular SML while retaining a maple leaf theme. The coin is similar to the platinum maple leaf with selective gold plating issued earlier this year. The coin has a central image of a maple leaf over of a semi-circle that merges with a shadow outline of the maple leaf. The semi-circle has selective gold plating. The coin is finished in matte Proof. It has a diameter of 65.25 mm, purity of .9999, and mintage of 2,000 coins.

Both of the anniversary Maple Leaf coins have an obverse featuring the tiara portrait of Queen Elizabeth, in use 25 years ago.

LITTLE LEAVES

The Royal Canadian Mint's October catalogue also includes the 2014-dated gold and silver fractional maple leaf sets.

Pierre Leduc designed the gold set using two sugar maple leaves. The coins are .9999 Fine and come in four weights and values: $50, one ounce; $10, quarter-ounce; $5 1/10-ounce; and $1 1/20-ounce.

For the first time, the coins in the fractional set are struck incuse, with the design below the surface of the coin.

The silver set consists of five coins: $5, ounce; $4, half-ounce; $3, quarter-ounce; $2, 1/10-ounce; and $1, 1/20-ounce. All of the coins have an image of two sugar maple leaves, designed by Arnold Nogy. The coins are struck in .9999 silver with selective gold plating on the top leaf in the design.

O CANADA ORCAS

October also sees three orca coins, all in the O Canada group, a massive series of various weights and denominations of gold and silver coins.

All three coins are designed by Leduc, who has created other whale coins for the Mint in the past.

These three coins are a gold $5 coin showing a whale breaking the surface with other members of the pod in the background; a silver $10 coin showing a breaching orca; and a silver $20 coin showing an adult female and cub.

The $5 has a weight of 1/10-ounce, diameter of 16 mm, and mintage of 4,000. It is the fifth and final coin of that weight and purity in the O Canada series. The $10 coin is the tenth of the series, with a weight of 15.87 grams and diameter of 34 mm; and the $25 is also the final of the series with a weight of 31.39 grams and diameter of 38 mm. The mintage limits are 40,000 for the $10 and 8,500 for the $25.

All three coins have a purity of .9999.

Orcas are featured on the latest coins in the O Canada series.

shields on the coins are selected to match the team colours of the team being featured. No designer is credited.

The coins are packaged in coin and stamp sets for each team. The set includes two Canada Post-issued commemorative stamps and the coin with a pop-up display in the form of the team's home jersey. One stamp showcases a team logo, while the second depicts a player.

The coins are the latest in a series of colourized 25-cent coins featuring Canadian NHL teams.

In 2006, coins were struck with the logos of the Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto teams, while coins were struck for the then six Canadian teams the following year. Winnipeg did not have a team at that time.

Hockey has been a common theme on Canadian coins. The sport has also appeared on a 50-cent piece issued on 2000; a series of eight coins issued in 2005 featuring NHL hockey legends who played for Montreal and Toronto; a set of colourized logo coins for the 100th anniversary of the Canadiens in 2009; and a set of six NHL action colourized 50-cent pieces in 2009.

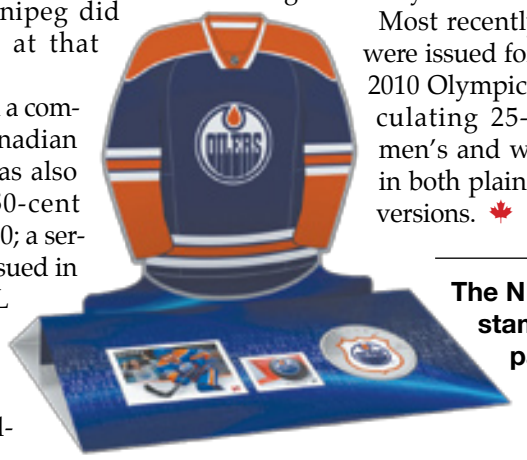
Among the dollar coins, another 24 logo and jersey coins were issued in 2008 and 2009, while the famous Lucky loonie of the Salt Lake City Winter Olympic Games has inspired a series of commemorative loon coins.

Silver dollars were issued in 1993 for the 100th anniversary of the Stanley Cup and again in 1997.

The 1997 coin depicts what many consider the most famous event in Canadian hockey, the series-winning goal by Paul Henderson during the final game of the 1972 Canada/USSR Summit Series.

In 2011, hockey great Wayne Gretzky and his father Walter were honoured on three coins with a portion of the sale going to the Wayne Gretzky Foundation.

Most recently, hockey coins were issued for the Vancouver 2010 Olympics, including circulating 25-cent coins for men's and women's hockey in both plain and colourized versions.



The NHL coin and stamp set is packaged in a pop-up holder.
